images that are likely to make teenagers more violent and aggressive in real life.

The object of 90 percent of the most popular games is to kill the people or creatures on the screen. Psychologists suggest that people who indulge in such games tend to be more violent towards (other) people as well. Connie Lam, a Form 4 student, agreed with Dr. Chak's conclusion. "Whenever I look into a video arcade, I always see quite a few rough-looking boys."

Game-playing teenagers, on the other hand, were unimpressed by the conclusions of the study. "Yes, of course the games are violent," said Danny Yeung, another Form 4 student, "but you express your violent feelings through the game and afterwards, you don't feel the need to be angry or aggressive in the real world."
