Questions : 1 ~ 5

“The mushroom growth of English medium schools should be checked, as they will be a source of trouble . . .” That was the warning last month in Lahore, Pakistan, in a Pakistan Times article on the problems of illiteracy in the country and the fact that more and more Pakistanis would rather be literate in English than in Urdu, the country’s official language.

It is pretty much the same almost everywhere in the world. Almost 800 million people now speak English as a first or second language—an increase of about 40 percent in the past twenty years. The language of the British and the Americans—American English is now the driving force—has become the language of communication among national elites, the language of people who want to “get ahead,” the language of technology, science, trade, diplomacy and of an internationalizing popular culture.

- What is the main idea of this passage?
 (A) The mushrooms are growing too fast.
 (B) The problem of illiteracy in Pakistan is serious.
 (C) English is losing its power.
 (D) English is still regarded as the most powerful language in the world.
- According to the passage, what language would a Pakistani rather learn if he has the chance?
 (A) Urdu. (C) English.
 (B) Pakistani. (D) Chinese.
- How many people now speak English as a first or second language ?
 (A) 550 million. (C) 450 million.
 (B) 800 million. (D) 320 million.

4. What is the problem of "illiteracy"?

(A) Inability to read.

(B) Inability to make a speech.

(C) Inability to understand literature.

(D) Refusing to learn.

5. What does "checked" in line 1 mean?

(A) examined

(B) encouraged

(C) stopped

(D) bill
